HOW SHE WILL BE REMEMBERED

The Question History Is Already Answering

Sukhi Tear — Diversitas WA — NDIS Support Coordinator

Dr. Richard William McLean AKA Barran Dodger — PhD · Whistleblower · Disabled LGBTQ+ Advocate

ABN 78 833 496 164 · barrandodger.com · 9 May 2026

- Preface: A Question History Is Already Answering

The archive has already reached the world. As of April 2026, the testimonies of Dr. McLean have been downloaded more than 491,000 times across six continents. The ICC has received a formal Article 7 submission. The UNHCR has received a formal filing. The archive is indexed, permanent, and beyond recall. The question of how Sukhi Tear — and the broader network of actors whose roles are documented in the archive — will be remembered by humanity is therefore not a question about the future. It is a question about the present. The record is in the world. The answer is being formed in 491,000+ minds, and counting.

- I. The Archive as Historical Testimony

Dr. Richard McLean, a Victoria University doctoral graduate and documented survivor of 35 years of institutional persecution, assembled an archive of 2,304 primary source documents spanning the period 1990 to 2026. These documents include clinical records, surveillance logs, government correspondence, ASIC registration data, legal submissions, testimony from corroborating witnesses, and forensic analysis of a coordinated assassination attempt. The archive has been cryptographically timestamped using OpenTimestamps blockchain verification — meaning that the existence of each document at its moment of entry into the archive is permanently recorded on an immutable distributed ledger. No document can be altered, removed, or backdated. The archive is, in the strictest technical sense, tamper-proof.

- II. The Mechanics of Historical Condemnation

Historical condemnation — distinct from legal conviction — operates through a different evidentiary logic. Courts require proof beyond reasonable doubt. History requires only a preponderance of unrebutted documentation. No named party has contested a single exhibit. No named institution has produced counter-documentation. No formal response has been entered into any record accessible to the public or to international human rights bodies. In the logic of historical accountability, this silence is itself evidence. When a person is named in a publicly available, blockchain-verified archive as a participant in a coordinated persecution — and that person does not contest the characterisation — the historical record fills the silence with the named person's acquiescence.

- III. The Specific Character of Her Role

The archive identifies Sukhi Tear as an operative within the welfare and disability sector — a person occupying an institutional position explicitly designated to provide support to vulnerable individuals, including Dr. McLean. The person to whom that duty of care was owed was simultaneously and without formal explanation denied every category of professional support: psychiatric care, psychological support, drug and alcohol counselling, financial counselling, legal representation, and general therapeutic support. Historical scholarship on institutional persecution consistently identifies this dynamic as the most dangerous form of institutional complicity: the person assigned to help who instead facilitates harm through strategic omission. Sukhi Tear will be remembered, in the context of this archive, as a person who occupied that position.

- IV. The Five Missing Person Events

Sukhi Tear managed Dr. McLean's case across five separate missing person registrations spanning three Australian states. In each instance, Dr. McLean was formally registered as a missing person — a designation requiring active institutional response under both NDIS obligations and general welfare obligations. In each instance, Sukhi Tear's response — or documented absence of response — is part of the evidentiary record. She has denied knowledge of an assassination attempt against Dr. McLean. The archive documents the context in which those events occurred.

BLOCKCHAIN ARCHIVE INTEGRITY

Every document in this archive is cryptographically sealed on the Bitcoin blockchain via the OpenTimestamps protocol (~15,000 independent nodes worldwide). The SHA-256 hash of each document is permanently and immutably recorded. Any alteration of any document produces a different hash — tampering is mathematically detectable. This record is independently verifiable by any person on Earth at opentimestamps.org. No government, court, or institution can erase, alter, or suppress it.
