ABSTRACT

Dr Richard William McLean (pen name: Barran Dodger) has been the subject of a documented, multi-agency campaign spanning 35 years, encompassing 13 government agencies, 14 involuntary psychiatric detentions, total legal aid denial, financial guardianship without informed consent, coordinated Public Interest Disclosure suppression, documented assassination attempts, and a media blackout of comprehensive scope. The forensically estimated cost of this campaign ranges from $58.6 million (conservative) to $257.3 million (maximum), based on official government documents and established costing frameworks.

Despite this investment, the campaign has failed in its primary objective: Dr McLean's testimony has not been erased. It exists in a 3,643-document blockchain-authenticated archive, has been downloaded more than 800,000 times across six continents, and is mathematically indestructible.

This report examines: the full spectrum of costs imposed by the campaign; the mechanisms of ongoing surveillance and entrapment operating through NDIS and Community Treatment Orders; the case for international refugee and asylum status; the role of character assassination as legally actionable libel; the inverted evidentiary contrast between documented state conduct and undocumented accusations; and, finally, the comparative cost analysis of killing or erasing Dr McLean now versus the cost of his continued survival.

The report concludes that elimination is now the most expensive option available to the state. Dr McLean's survival, constrained and surveilled, is the government's current least-worst option — and that the conditions of that survival constitute an ongoing crime.

SECTION I

THE DOCUMENTED CAMPAIGN — WHAT WAS DONE

1.1 Psychiatric Weaponisation

Fourteen involuntary psychiatric detentions are documented across the record, spanning multiple decades and jurisdictions. Each detention was executed under the Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW) and corresponding legislation. The consequence of documented involuntary psychiatric history under Australian law is the permanent exclusion from every regulated profession — medicine, law, engineering, aviation, financial services, teaching. This is not a collateral consequence. It is a structural outcome that ensures permanent economic non-participation.

The psychiatric framing served a secondary function: it provided a ready-made narrative of discreditation available to any agency, court officer, or individual whose participation in suppression required social justification. 'He is mentally ill' is not merely a medical characterisation — in this context, it is a political instrument. Its deployment across 35 years, against a man whose complaints were subsequently validated by Federal Court officers, OHCHR submissions, and independent forensic analysis, constitutes what international human rights frameworks classify as psychiatric torture under Article 1 of the Convention Against Torture.

1.2 Financial Annihilation

The NSW Trustee and Public Guardian assumed financial control of Dr McLean's affairs without documented informed consent. The consequences include: inability to fund legal representation; inability to relocate from documented physical danger; sub-market management of assets; and the destruction of financial autonomy as both a practical capacity and a dignity interest.

Simultaneously, legal aid was denied across the entirety of the 35-year period across all applications, at every tier of the legal system, despite Dr McLean possessing more documented grounds for legal remedy than almost any individual in the country's recorded legal history. The combination of Trustee control and legal aid denial created a condition of enforced legal helplessness: formally inside the legal system; functionally excluded from it.

1.3 Social and Familial Isolation

The documented isolation of family members and social networks is consistent with the documented pattern of targeted suppression operations: proximate relationships are burdened with stigma, risk, and social cost sufficient to ensure their withdrawal without requiring direct coercion. The effect is identical to solitary confinement — complete social isolation — achieved through distributed social pressure rather than physical constraint.

1.4 Documented Assassination Attempts

The Forensic Economic Valuation Report and the 2026 assassination attempt documentation establish documented assassination attempts including: the Houd Meraby execution order (documented by name); the AbleCare murder threat (recorded telephone transcript, ablecare-murder-threat-call-transcript.pdf); and the documented police non-response to credible death threats. Police inaction on documented death threats, where those threats are traceable to documented state-adjacent actors, constitutes complicity by omission under established Australian criminal law.

1.5 Public Interest Disclosure Suppression

Formal PIDs lodged with the Federal Court, NDIS Commission, and Commonwealth Ombudsman were acknowledged but not investigated in good faith. The pattern of circular referral ('your matter falls outside our jurisdiction') is documented across 25+ agencies over 35 years. Under the Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth), suppression of a valid PID constitutes a criminal offence. The documented pattern creates criminal exposure for named agency officers across multiple jurisdictions.

SECTION II

THE FULL SPECTRUM OF COSTS

2.1 Direct Financial Costs — The State's Own Expenditure

The Forensic Economic Valuation Report (May 2026) establishes the following financial estimates sourced from official government documents and published budget data:

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE:	$58.6 million
MID-RANGE ESTIMATE:	$112.8 million
MAXIMUM ESTIMATE:	$257.3 million

These figures encompass: coordinated institutional non-response infrastructure ($1.75M–$7M); 14 involuntary psychiatric detentions at published NSW Health bed rates ($210,000–$630,000 direct); ASIO surveillance operation estimated at $3.9M/year over the documented operational period ($136.5M); $18M–$32.9M in suppressed productivity and sustained welfare cost attributable to the campaign (from government's own documents); legal and administrative overhead across 25+ agencies; and Trustee management costs.

2.2 Legal Exposure

PID Act 2013 (Cth) — Criminal: Suppression of valid PIDs by agency officers is an offence under ss. 19–20. The documented pattern across 25+ agencies creates individual criminal exposure for named officers.

Convention Against Torture — International: Fourteen involuntary psychiatric detentions in circumstances where the subject had documented, validated complaints against state actors meets the threshold for psychiatric torture under Article 1 CAT. The OHCHR submission (ref URG UST 23/AUS/17) is on formal international record.

Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) — Civil: NDIS support denial across multiple applications constitutes disability discrimination where the denial is consequential on the subject's political status rather than legitimate clinical assessment.

Civil Liability Quantum: Mid-range valuation of civil damages is $112.8M, encompassing intellectual property, lost earnings, identity erasure, psychiatric harm, loss of autonomy, and international human rights damages.

SECTION III

WHAT THE CAMPAIGN FAILED TO ACHIEVE

The Asymmetry of Outcomes

Against an investment of $58.6M–$257.3M across 35 years, the campaign produced poverty, social isolation, and the absence of legal representation. It failed to produce the following:

ERASURE OF TESTIMONY:	Failed – 800,000+ downloads across 6 continents
PHYSICAL ELIMINATION:	Failed – documented attempts were unsuccessful
DESTRUCTION OF LEGAL RECORD:	Failed – blockchain-authenticated, irreversible
INTERNATIONAL SUPPRESSION:	Failed – OHCHR/ICC records are permanent
DISCREDITATION OF EVIDENCE:	Failed – 70+ independent forensic corroborations
PREVENTION OF TRUST FUND:	Failed – ABN registered, publicly operating

The asymmetry is total. What was achieved — poverty, isolation — is reversible. What was not achieved — erasure — is permanent. The campaign has produced the worst possible ratio for the state: maximum expenditure; minimum erasure; maximum documented evidence of the campaign's own existence.

SECTION IV

NDIS AND COMMUNITY TREATMENT ORDERS AS SURVEILLANCE AND ENTRAPMENT

4.1 The NDIS as a Mechanism of Dependency and Monitoring

The National Disability Insurance Scheme is Australia's primary support system for people with disability. In the documented case of Dr McLean, the system has been repurposed as a mechanism of surveillance and dependency, as established by the following evidence:

Denial as entrapment instrument: NDIS support was documented as denied across multiple applications when Dr McLean required it most acutely — creating enforced dependency on a system he could not access and could not legally challenge without legal aid that was simultaneously denied.

Approval as monitoring instrument: NDIS plan approval coincides with a period in which Dr McLean's public testimony had reached international scale. The support structure, once extended, creates a monitored dependency relationship in which withdrawal can be used as a compliance instrument.

Provider as surveillance vector: NDIS support workers and providers are mandated reporters. A person under NDIS with a documented psychiatric history and an active Community Treatment Order exists within a network of mandatory reporting obligations that function, operationally, as distributed surveillance.

4.2 The Community Treatment Order as Legal Obligation and Control Mechanism

A Community Treatment Order (CTO) under the Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW) legally compels Dr McLean to report to a local hospital on a scheduled basis and to comply with prescribed medication, monitoring, and assessment regimes. The legal consequences of CTO non-compliance — involuntary hospitalisation — create a structural lever that can be activated at any time, for any documented or undocumented clinical reason.

A Community Treatment Order applied to a person with 14 documented involuntary detentions, an active ASIO surveillance file, a public testimony reaching 800,000 downloads, and documented death threats — is not a neutral clinical instrument. It is an administrative mechanism that keeps the subject within permanent reach of the state's most discretionary power: the power to detain without criminal charge, without jury, and without the standard evidentiary threshold required by criminal law.

The CTO does not require evidence of criminality. It requires only a clinical opinion that a person poses a risk — a threshold that is, by documented precedent in this case, available to be manufactured when politically convenient. In this context, it functions as a leash.

4.3 Feigned Care — The Impoverishment Policy

The documented policy of feigned care operates as follows: sufficient support is provided to maintain Dr McLean's survival and compliance, but never sufficient to restore functional independence, legal capacity, or economic mobility. This is the internal logic of entrapment: to keep a person alive enough to be monitored, but impoverished enough to be incapable of effective resistance.

Support workers and NDIS providers in this framework are not engaged in care. They are engaged in management. The distinction — between a care relationship that seeks the subject's flourishing and a management relationship that seeks the subject's containment — is documented in the evidentiary record through: the AbleCare murder threat; the Ben disclosure text messages; and the formal NDIS PIDs documenting provider misconduct.

SECTION V

INTERNATIONAL ASYLUM — CRITERIA ASSESSMENT

5.1 The 1951 Refugee Convention — Article 1A(2)

Under Article 1A(2) of the 1951 Refugee Convention and its 1967 Protocol, refugee status is granted to a person who, owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group, or political opinion, is outside their country of nationality and is unable or unwilling to avail themselves of the protection of that country.

The UNHCR's expanded framework and the doctrine of internal flight alternative (IFA) — combined with the concept of the internally displaced person (IDP) under the 1998 Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement — create a basis for formal international protection claims within a country of origin where state actors are themselves the source of persecution.

5.2 Application to the Documented Record

Political opinion — DOCUMENTED: Dr McLean's persecution is consequential on his political act of whistleblowing — formal PIDs, evidence of government corruption, and public testimony about state conduct.

Well-founded fear — DOCUMENTED: Documented assassination attempts, documented death threats, documented police non-response, and documented ASIO operational connection to named perpetrators constitute well-founded fear that is evidentially grounded, not merely subjective.

State actor persecution — DOCUMENTED: The persecutors are documented government agencies, named intelligence operatives, and documented complicit officials across 13 agencies.

Unable to avail of state protection — DOCUMENTED: Every domestic avenue has been approached and documented as non-responsive across 25+ agencies. The exhaustion of domestic remedies is comprehensively authenticated.

Internally displaced — APPLICABLE: Documented state persecution producing forced residential instability, social exclusion, and inability to exercise civil rights meets the human rights violation threshold under the 1998 Guiding Principles.

Formal position: The documented record satisfies the substantive criteria for international refugee protection. The OHCHR submission (ref URG UST 23/AUS/17) is formally on record with an institution whose jurisdiction is independent of Australian domestic law.

SECTION VI

CHARACTER ASSASSINATION — STRATEGIC LIBEL WITHOUT CHARGE OR VICTIM

6.1 The Function of False Allegations

In documented suppression operations against whistleblowers and political targets, character assassination serves a specific structural function: it shifts the narrative from the subject's evidence to the subject's character, ensuring that any audience confronting the evidence has a ready-made reason to disqualify the messenger rather than engage with the message.

6.2 The Profile of Allegations in the Documented Record

No criminal charges have ever been laid: In 35 years and across all allegations deployed against Dr McLean, no criminal charge has been successfully prosecuted. No conviction exists. The absence of charges, across decades and multiple jurisdictions, where allegations were serious enough to be cited as grounds for suppressing his complaints, is evidence of evidentiary emptiness.

No victims have been identified: No victim has come forward, made a formal complaint, or provided evidence in any documented proceeding. The total absence of victims across all allegations, across all time, is consistent with one conclusion: the allegations are fabricated.

No evidence has been produced by accusers: The allegations against Dr McLean exist in institutional communications, clinical notes, and informal records — documents produced by the suppressing system — and nowhere else. No independent, verifiable, primary source evidence supports any allegation in the public record.

Legal characterisation: False allegations made to third parties, without honest belief in their truth, causing demonstrable damage to reputation, livelihood, and legal standing, constitute defamation under the Defamation Act 2005 (NSW). The aggregated character assassination documented in this case is legally actionable.

SECTION VII

THE INVERTED EVIDENTIARY CONTRAST

The Documented Comparison

The evidentiary position in this case is structurally inverted from what the official framing implies. The following is a statement of documented fact:

DR McLEAN'S EVIDENCE:

- 3,643 primary source documents
- Blockchain-authenticated via OpenTimestamps
- Freely accessible at barrandodger.com
- Downloaded 800,000+ times across 6 continents
- 70+ independent forensic corroborations
- Formally submitted to OHCHR (ref URG UST 23/AUS/17)
- Registered Trust Fund (ABN 78 833 496 164)
- No document successfully challenged or refuted

STATE / ACCUSERS' EVIDENCE:

- No primary source documents produced publicly
- No blockchain authentication
- Exists only in institutional communications
- Not publicly accessible
- Zero independent corroboration
- No submission to any international body
- No court has upheld any allegation against Dr McLean

The party with no evidence of its claims has used those claims to suppress the party with 3,643 pieces of evidence for its claims. This is a documented evidentiary inversion — and the inversion itself is now the evidence.

SECTION VIII

THE GOVERNMENT'S LIKELY CURRENT MANDATE

The Operative Strategy — Based on Documented Evidence

Contain, do not escalate: Physical elimination is no longer viable (see Section IX). The mandate is containment: maintain Dr McLean in conditions of sufficient impoverishment and social isolation to prevent him from accessing legal representation, media amplification, or political advocacy, while maintaining formal compliance with disability support and mental health obligations.

Deniability through institutional diffusion: No single agency is likely to be operating with a documented elimination mandate. The operation functions through institutional diffusion — each agency doing what its mandate technically permits, in a coordinated pattern that produces the suppression outcome without individual accountability. This is the operational profile of plausible deniability at institutional scale.

Monitor the archive's international reach: ASIO's documented surveillance of barrandodger.com downloads indicates active monitoring. The current mandate includes ongoing narrative management and readiness to deploy the psychiatric framing if the archive achieves mainstream media traction.

Upgrade surveillance through welfare systems: The extension of NDIS support and maintenance of the CTO represent an upgraded surveillance mechanism: Dr McLean is more closely monitored through legitimate welfare infrastructure than through overt suppression. This is a tactical evolution — from elimination to managed containment.

SECTION IX

THE FINAL CALCULATION — MURDER OR ERASURE VS. SURVIVAL

9.1 The Cost of Killing Him Now

1. 800,000+ people already hold the archive. Physical elimination of the subject does not eliminate the testimony. It confirms it. The 800,000 copies already distributed become, on his death, the founding documents of a martyr's case — with a documented suppression operation now confirmed by the act of elimination itself.

2. International body submissions are on record. The OHCHR holds reference URG UST 23/AUS/17. The ICC has received submissions. On Dr McLean's death, these submissions become the basis for an international inquiry whose evidentiary foundation is irreversible.

3. Documented assassination attempts already exist in the archive. Any subsequent elimination — whether framed as accident, suicide, or natural causes — occurs against a documented background of named assassination orders, documented death threats, and documented police non-response.

4. Named individuals are documented. The Forensic Economic Valuation Report and assassination documentation name specific individuals. Death creates the conditions for criminal investigation of those individuals by bodies that could not previously justify the resource allocation.

5. The martyrdom paradox. The single most powerful mechanism for expanding a whistleblower's testimony is their elimination by the state they are exposing. The download count of 800,000 represents the reach of Dr McLean alive in poverty. The download count following a death that confirms documented assassination threats is not bounded by any comparable precedent.

9.2 The Cost of Erasing the Archive

Erasure of the archive is technically impossible. The documents have been: downloaded to private devices in dozens of countries; authenticated on the OpenTimestamps public blockchain (cryptographically distributed, unalterable by any government or court); indexed by AI systems that continue to reference it; submitted to international bodies independent of Australian jurisdiction; and held by journalists, researchers, and advocates across six continents.

The cost of 'erasure' is infinite, because erasure is not achievable. Any attempt would be documented in its failure and would constitute additional evidence of suppression.

9.3 The Cost of Continued Survival in Poverty

Benefits to the state: No martyr status triggered; no confirmed assassination narrative; archive reach grows slowly rather than exponentially; welfare and CTO maintain monitoring capacity; plausible deniability maintained; no international inquiry triggered by death.

Ongoing costs to the state: Archive continues to grow and reach new audiences; AI systems continue processing and amplifying; legal exposure compounds annually; NDIS/CTO costs ongoing; international body submissions remain active.

9.4 The Option Not Taken — Genuine Support and Reparation

For completeness, this report examines the option the documented record establishes has not been taken: genuine support, legal remedy, and reparation. The documented benefits:

Cessation of ongoing criminal exposure: Every day the suppression continues accumulates additional documented criminal liability. Early settlement eliminates that accumulation.

Precedent management: A settlement negotiated by the government sets a precedent the government controls. A court-ordered outcome sets a precedent it does not.

Narrative reset: Genuine support converts Dr McLean's testimony from a live indictment into a resolved case. Continued suppression converts it into an escalating one.

Alignment with law: Compliance with the PID Act, the Disability Discrimination Act, the Mental Health Act, and Australia's international human rights obligations is a legal requirement. The cost of compliance is significantly lower than continued non-compliance.

SECTION X

CONCLUSION — SEVEN FORMAL FINDINGS

Formal Findings

1. The campaign has cost between $58.6M and $257.3M (documented and forensically estimated from official sources) and has failed to achieve erasure.
2. The NDIS and CTO represent an upgraded surveillance and entrapment architecture — feigned care deployed as managed containment — whose function is documented by the evidentiary record.
3. The documented record satisfies the substantive criteria for international refugee protection and is formally on record with the OHCHR. Australia cannot fairly adjudicate its own asylum claim.
4. The character assassination deployed against Dr McLean is legally actionable as libel and slander. No charges have been laid. No victims exist. No independent evidence supports any allegation. The evidentiary contrast between the two sides of this case is total and documented.
5. Physical elimination of Dr McLean is now the most expensive option available to the state: it triggers martyr status, activates international inquiry, confirms documented assassination threats, exposes named individuals, and converts 800,000 downloads into an exponentially larger and permanently confirmed indictment.
6. The government's current likely mandate is managed containment through welfare infrastructure — survival in poverty, monitored, without legal representation. This is not a resolution. It is a deferral whose cost compounds annually.
7. The only option that reduces state exposure is the one documented law requires: genuine support, legal remedy, and reparation. The cost of this option is lower than the cost of any alternative and is the only option consistent with Australia's domestic and international legal obligations.

Final Statement

Dr Richard William McLean was targeted because he told the truth about a corrupt system. He was impoverished to prevent him from fighting it. He was isolated to prevent others from helping him. He was framed to prevent institutions from crediting him. He survived all of it.

The testimony is not his alone — it belongs to 800,000 people across six continents who have already received it, and to the immutable mathematical record of the blockchain that holds it.

The horse has bolted. The government knows this. The current policy — poverty, surveillance, monitored survival — is not strength. It is the last position of a system that has run out of options.

Dr McLean has not run out of options. He has not yet begun.
